New Delhi's Rising Sculptor, Srinia Chowdhury to Display at Lalit Kala

November 18, 2015 (NEW DELHI): Srinia Chowdhury, a rising sculptor from New Delhi debunked the notion about ceramics. She is all set to debut a solo exhibition with ceramic sculptures opening on November 23 at 6pm and shall be available for view till November 29, 2015 between 11am and 7pm at the Lalit Kala Akademy, New Delhi.

"Clay is like a baby and behaves the way it is treated and interacted with", says the young sculptor. While many believe that ceramics only mean pottery, and have very limited implementation as far as creating art is concerned, few others including Srinia have the belief that ceramics is a medium with great possibilities which is yet to be explored.

Known and Unknown – a search within, a concept on which Ms. Chowdhury had been working, has now found way into the reality from the hypothesis of just being in a state of imagination. The current series of works by Srinia Chowdhury have a whimsical quality yet possesses a solidarity in their forms. The solid quality depicts the vast universe around the artist and the little world she dwells in.

While the previous series of her works were based on society and herself, the new works are based on a search of human relationship with mysterious yet meaningful signs and symbols and its deep relationship with nature.

“The whole process of making it completely with my hands and then sending it in a kiln for transformation is a magical process” added the sculptor.

The show at Lalit Kala will be graced by the presence of Padma Shri Awardee Prof. Biman Bihari Das, eminent sculptor and painter; and Mr. Johny ML, art critic and art historian.
